INTRODUCTION

Leaving your 9-5 to start a private practice can feel overwhelming, but with the right steps, you can transition confidently and build a successful business on your own terms. This guide will help you lay the foundation, avoid common pitfalls, and take the guesswork out of launching your practice.

Step 1: Get Clear on Your Vision

Before making the leap, ask yourself:

What does financial freedom look like for me?

How do I want my work-life balance to feel?

What kind of impact do I want to make in my community?

Step 2: Understand the Financials

How Much Do You Need to Make to Leave Your 9-5?

- Calculate your monthly expenses (personal + business).
- Determine how many clients you need to see weekly to cover those costs.
- Start saving a financial cushion (3-6 months of expenses recommended).

Income Streams to Consider:

- Private pay clients
- Insurance reimbursements
- Superbill model
- Digital products or courses

Step 3: Legal & Business Setup

To make your practice official, you need:

- A business entity (LLC or PLLC)
- An EIN (Employer Identification Number)
- A business bank account
- Liability insurance
- A HIPAA-compliant EHR system

Step 4: Attract Your First Clients

You do not need a huge following to book clients. Instead, focus on:

- Optimizing Your Psychology Today & Therapy Den Profiles
- Networking with Other Therapists & Doctors for Referrals
- Creating a Simple Website with a Booking Link
- Engaging in Local or Online Therapist Groups

Step 5: Make the Leap with Confidence

- Start part-time if possible, building your caseload before leaving.
- Have a transition plan (notice period, finances in order).
- Trust your skills and know that private practice is a learnable process.

You are more than capable of making this happen!

What steps will you take to ensure a smooth transition?
